

Becoming Unstoppable: Moving From a Team of Leaders to a Leadership Team

You've read it many times before: Successful companies are built by great teams who create strong cultures of excellence. But if teamwork is so important, then why are there so many average and dysfunctional teams?

Great teams don't just happen. They're built on strengthening relationships between team members – one day, one interaction at a time. Explore five common team dysfunctions and ways to effectively resolve them.

Sue Hawkes will identify the five components of healthy teams, and share practices that participants can use immediately with their own teams to build team health. The components are:

1. Trust
2. Healthy Conflict
3. Commitment
4. Accountability
5. Attention to Results

Sue shares how each component is built on the previous and how to strengthen them to create an unstoppable team.

Content Style: Presentation format with multiple break-out sessions for participants to share their experiences and best practices. Q & A throughout. We understand business leaders like to stay engaged and find meaning in presentations- their time is valuable!
